> POETRY. The Fallen Leaves.

We stand among the fallen leaves, Young children at our play, And laugh to see the yellow things. Go rustling on their way; Right merrily we hunt them down, . The autumn winds and we. Nor pause to gaze where show drifts lie. Or sunbeams wild the tree With dancing feet we leap along Where withered boughs are strown The past nor tuture-checks nor song-The present is our own.

We stand among the fullen leaved In youth's enchanted apring-When hope (who wearies at the last) First spreads her eagle wing. We tread with steps of conscious strength Beneath the leafless trees, And the color kindles un our cheek As blows the winter breeze; While gazing toward the cold, gray sky, Clouded with snow and rain, We wish the old year all past by, And the young spring again. We stand among the faller leaves In manhood's haughty prime-Visen first our pausing-licuits begin. To love " the olden time; Andres .. e gaze, we sigh to think How many a year hath passed, Os, footsteps wandered last; And old companions-now, perchance, Estranged, forgot, or dead---

Since 'neath these cold and faded trees Come round us, as those autumn leaves Are crushed beneath our tread. We stand among the fallen leaves In our autumn day— And tottering on with feeble steps, Parsae our cheerless way. We look not back-too long ago -Hath-all-we loved been lost; Nor forward-tor we may not live To see our new hone crossed. But on we go-the sun's faint beam A feeble warmth imparts—

Few men have triumphed over a louder threatening tide of fortune, than he. Cradled in want, he has laughed at his shackles, even while unable to escape them. His whole life has been a wartare. Poverty has been his opponent, but an unbending spirit has been his ally.

In speaking, his manner is singularly attractive, as most of our readers can testify. He speaks, and his voice sweeps through the house like the heavy, rich tones of a distant bell. The audience sinks into silence, and be proceeds to picture his subject, as clear as a man, and with the skill of an artist. His dark eve burns withanimation; his words worke, like the organ-notes, and his captivated hearers soriender, willingly, to his eloquence. This is the power of a selfmade northern thechanic. Deprive his tongue of its winning cones, leaving to his heart its energies, and lic is still on his monument, like.a. statue, which retains all its greatness when time has washed away its poish.
We lock upon Mr. Morse as we would upon a tree grown strong upon a rock; admiring the vigor of us growth amid such sterility, and teeling it must have been a mammoth production in a more favorable position. He has has been like a man, without chart or compass, in an open boat, in mid ocean: and guided only by the stars and the God of stars, he has made his-way through the tempest and the billow, and reached a haven safely. Where there is a great mind, no cloud can obscure it, no wall can confine it. It will kindle within itself a fire, which shall dissolve the shadows that encompass it. and disdaming to scale the walls of its prison, it will beat them down. With our frumble pen, we will not presume to speak the just enlogy of Mr Morse, for it would be like an attempt to polish gold with , sands .alone he has risen, and he will stand slone, a nuble example, to be held up in the workshops of our people, of the excellence of self-reliance.
